

USE YOUR POWER WELL

“How can it be that organisms of such magnificent function can denigrate themselves such that they believe that their origin was from something so base, that it defies logic? To understand this you need not look at the physiological implications but, rather the psychological and spiritual.

The complexity of the body cannot be denied, but the divinity of the spirit can, especially by those whose opinions of themselves is no greater than that which they say that they come from: non-life. If they had respect for their being, they would stand in awe of their splendor, and not deny their own personal dignity given by the special nature of their creation by their Creator.

They would also not deny the sixth sense, that of ‘spiritual touch’, for in it is eternal being given by The Creator. They rather would like to think that they are more like a cloud that comes and goes with the wind, and that their comings and goings are actually of their own accord, and under their control.

They deny the realm that coexists directly parallel to the physical realm, in which they feel imprisoned. In denying their eternal nature they feel some control over their own destiny, at least in the short time here on Earth.

This denial is largely a facet of human pride, manifest in a need to control. Oddly enough however, this pride does not extend to a full appreciation of who they truly are—in God. Sadly, for the ones in denial, this only keeps them from the joys of living in The Lord, and experiencing a much higher form of life.

Pride blinds one to this principle as one ignorantly believes that they are already living a higher form of life than others, who are not so disposed. They however mock themselves and trivialize their existences by bringing themselves down to the level of existence of a snail, or any other creature who does not share the glorious qualities of a human being.

This is also a factor in the numerous suicides and assisted deaths that are carried out today, the illusion of a low worth of human life. This act of defiance of themselves, and God, is met directly with death of the Hope of Salvation; and generally results in an immediate trip to Hell, or if in the Mercy of God...to one of the outer realms of learning.

Of all that you must not do, this is right at the top of the list but directly under taking the Mark of the Beast, grieving The Holy Spirit, and cursing God. You must not do it. Suicide is not your decision to make, and you have not the authority to take your life. You did not create you, and you have no option to remove yourself from Creation.

You may think that you have this freedom of choice, and you certainly can do it; but you doom your eternal existence by flying in the Face of God, by taking this authority from Him, and the purpose to which you are assigned from the beginning of time. You are not a simple carnal being put here on Earth by happenstance...you are an integral part of God's grand Plan; and for you to take this power and terminate God's plan for you is the gravest of sins.

Everything you do is counted, even right down to your thoughts. You matter greatly to God, but He has given you the free will to save or doom yourself.

Choose life."
