“Thanks be to God for life, for He did not have to produce life. He could have stayed with The Son, The Holy Spirit, and others of the spirit realm that He generated; and He would have had a wonderful core of existence.

It was not necessary to produce and expand the universe from the point that it was before the Earth’s creation, and the creation of all else that sustained the Earth and life thereon. God is perfect and complete in Himself, and did not need anything else; but in His grand love, He wanted to share all of His creations with live, thinking, spiritual creatures, that were capable of independent and willful love for Him. This was an act of infinite compassion, mercy, and love.

When He created man, He loved him greatly, and made all to serve him that was on Earth; and the only precondition was that man obediently serve Him, their loving and generous Creator. In addition to the earthly realm God made realms of reward for His children as well, and has since gone to great lengths to shower man with blessings and hope for eternal peace and love.

Can you imagine the depths of sorrow that God experienced when man rebelled? God has infinite emotions and can see all outside time, so He knew what the horrible future for man would be on the world that He had to curse, and allow Satan to influence greatly...now that man had failed. This sorrow was felt by all that God had created, and there was a great time of mourning in all realms—but the ones assigned to Satan and his angels.

God created man with all capabilities necessary to resist the devil; the rebellion and disobedience did not have to happen, and it was not ordained to happen; and it ruined a perfect environment for man and his offspring, because of his choice.

For those who profess that God preordains all events, I say return to the Word and learn that this is simply not truth. God gave man will, and God gave man choice—and complete control over it. Every decision by man changes the path that he is on, some in great ways, and some in quite subtle ways; but the path that God has created for man is rarely followed in a straightforward fashion. Man takes diversions along the way, as good and evil push and pull.

God knows the precise outcome of all human actions and thoughts, but He does not impose them. Thus, you see that all humans are completely responsible for the destination that their path leads to. The straight path, created by God, leads to Him; there are no guarantees for those who make their path crooked.

Study to be approved, and learn your path.”
